

Google Maps adds hearing loops

Google Maps now includes hearing loops and assistive listening devices in the accessibility information on its website. This will be helpful for users of hearing aids, cochlear implants, and other listening devices. See the images below as a guide for finding the information on your smart device or computer.

This is an ongoing project, so if you know of a venue that has assistive listening devices, you can lend a hand by identifying them - click on above link to find out how.

Smartphone or Tablet App:

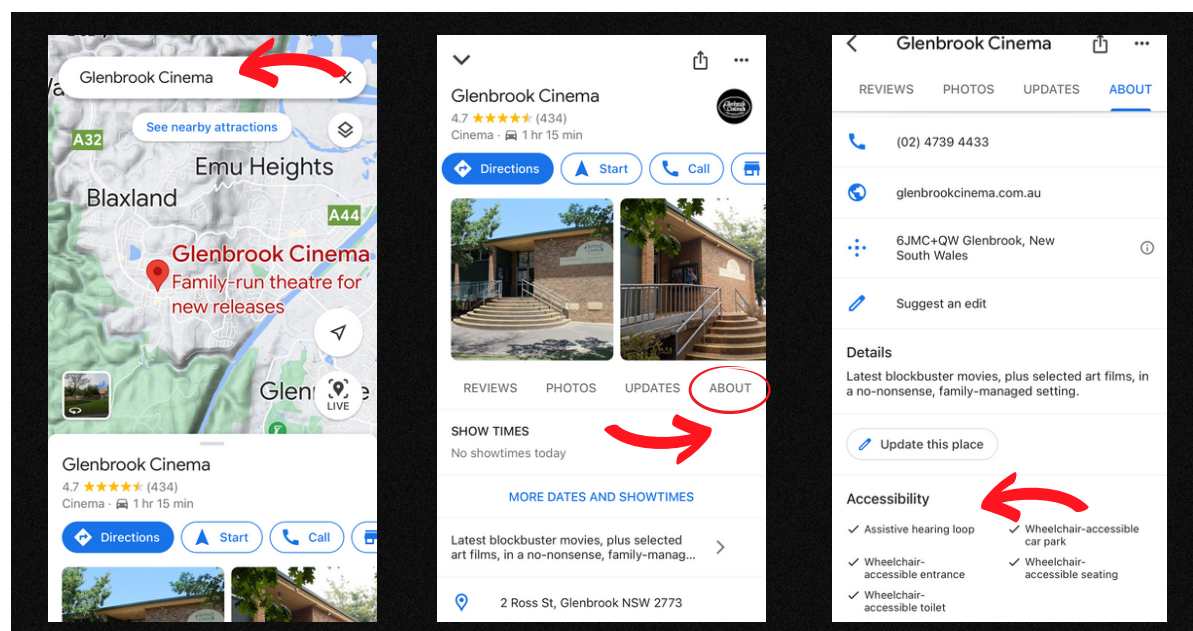

Open the Google Maps app

Type in the venue name

Scroll down and across

Click on ABOUT

Scroll down to the Accessibility section

Computer:

Search Google Maps on your computer

Type the venue name in the box

Click on the information section with the arrow >

This will take you to the Accessibility section
